Good morning Bob and Cynthia

Cynthia 7:27 AM

Hi Len.

aztecs99 7:31 AM

According to the Wall Street Journal (WSJ), China is looking to exclude national security issues from the trade negotiations with the US with an aim to break the deadlock." China is looking to narrow the scope of its negotiations with the US to only trade matters," the WSJ said.

len 7:35 AM

That is interesting.

huh.. I thought I was middle class or maybe Chiacgo isn't a big city?

good morning all! looks like a potential choppy day

Boston mustn't be a "big city". I know lots of people living middle class lifestyles on far, far less. Or maybe Tim has an unrealistic idea of what middle class is.

Non-stop talk about how this bull market has gone on too long. Meanwhile, we just had a bear market in the S&P 500 in Q4 of 2018 and the Russell 2000 is trying to come out of its 1-year bear market.

JD 9:18 AM

>Market Color ASHR - Call trade in China A-Shares ETF rolls position up and out in anticipation of trade resolution. Trader on the Amex paid 2c for the Sep 28.5/Oct 4th 29 call spread this morning, nearly 25K times, as the underlying ETF traded $28.46. Oct 4th calls open, while the sale of the Sep 28.5 calls matches an opening trade from last week at the same price when ASHR was about 20c lower. That trade was rolled from Sep 28 calls, and today's flow suggests continued optimism that Chinese equities will continue to rebound- ASHR bottomed out near $25.61 in July.

>Market Color VIAV - Unusual call buying in Viavi preceded guidance update from firm. Shares of Viavi (formerly JDSU) lifted 75c, or 5.3% on Wednesday, as call volume surged to 70K contracts, vs 863 puts, and implied volatility rose nearly 20 points in the September term, to nearly 55%, the highest non-earnings level in over a year. Timing of the flow suggests information may have leaked, as call buyers hit the stock yesterday when shares were $14.03, paying 20 to 25c for 2500 Oct 15 calls within a minute starting at 10:15AM ET. On the day 43K Oct 15 calls traded, for an average price of 55c, net opening 20K contracts. The largest single trade was the 1260lot sweep buyer paying 22c. Stock closed at $14.85, and the Oct 15 calls at 82c - a same-day gain of 272% on the initial buying

from RH

11:07 AM

RH (RH), formerly known as Restoration Hardware, said Thursday it plans to explore a potential $300 million convertible note offering, to qualified institutional buyers and due 2024. The home furnishings retailer said it plans to use proceeds from a potential offering primarily to retire $200 million of second lien debt, reduce outstanding borrowings from its credit facility and pay net costs of the convertible note hedge. The company said retirement of the second-lien debt would lower interest expenses by $6.5 million in the second half of fiscal 2019, and $18 million on an annual basis, which would allow the company to raise 2019 adjusted EPS by about 20 cents to 25 cents and by 65 cents to 70 cents in fiscal 2020. The stock, which is currently halted for news, was up 3.2% prior to the halt. It has rallied 43.9% year to date, while the S&P 500 has gained 19.8%

I first started noticing MRCY a while back at $40 from the TradeStation Scanner. Last week I received a punch in the face from my scanner. I bought a spread trade on Alteryx (AYX) it has been a high flyer and my timing was not good. It took a big dump, but I know from the past that the scanner is a good tool. That's is why I always say to use the scanner as a guide. Today I followed Bob on the GWRE trade and see it is in the scanner results for today. Will send the results in a few minutes.

1:33 PM

From an intermediate-term viewpoint, the $VIX chart has become more bullish as well. $VIX closed below 17, and as long as it stays below that level, it is a bullish sign for stocks. However, the 20-day moving average of $VIX is still above the 200-day, so that is a potential negative, but it is not meaningful unless $VIX is above 17 as well.In summary, nearly all of our indicators are bullish, and thus so are we. The bulls are in charge now, as long as $SPX remains above 2940 and $VIX remains below 17.

1:33 PM

the cumulative Advance-Decline lines (both NYSE and “stocks only”) have been making new all-time highs, in advance of the market itself doing so. The NYSE cumulative A-D line has made a new all-time high for the last six trading days in a row. The “stocks only” has done the same for the last two days. As a reminder, while this is “nice” that the cumulative A-D line is making new all-times, that is no guarantee at all that the market will continue higher. The cumulative A-D line is only useful as a negatively divergent indicator. There is no negative divergence at this time

1:34 PM

New highs have been running ahead of new lows for the last week. That keeps this indicator bullish for now. Meanwhile, volatility has declined, and that is bullish, too. The $VIX “spike peak” buy signal, which originally occurred on August 6th has “expired” (that is, we have a trading system based on spike peaks in the $VIX chart, and that trading system’s buy signal terminates after 22 trading days). In addition to the original signal, there were three more overlapping buy signals during August

Jim Cramer: Think Twice About Buying Right Now

When we get this overbought, any negative news could turn into a violent pullback.

Today at 1:53 PM(131 kB)

<https://s.thestreet.com/files/tsc/v2008/photos/contrib/uploads/301de583-7bb6-11e8-9292-0f8658a3d91c.jpg>

4:07 PM

Yet, there's one thing I am concerned about, one thing that does have me worried, the S&P 500's proprietary short-range oscillator -- the one I have subscribed to for 30 years, the one that says be careful, be very careful, because it currently stands at 8, and that's really way overbought. Now my concern may be way off base. The last time we were this overbought was when Powell switched directions, and we were no longer fighting the Fed. It was a time when the market never really quit. But, historically, I have not made a lot of money when it's at 8, in the same way that I have not made a lot of money when I sell at minus 8. The buyers usually get exhausted when we get to this level, in the same way that they are pooped when we get down so long so quickly.

LeeAnn 4:09 PM

Tomorrow needs to at least open strong (or close -- whatever, just to get up high enough to negate this doji (and not create a double, is that even a thing)) or we could have a bad evening star pattern. (edited)
